

An Australian air force plane has reportedly caught fire during exercises at an American military base in Nevada.

A US Air Force statement says a military aircraft was forced to abort its take off at the Nellis Air Base, near Las Vegas, on Saturday morning (local time) and then caught fire but no one was seriously injured.

American media reports say the plane involved was an RAAF EA-18G Growler fighter plane.

A US Air Force statement says a military aircraft was forced to abort its take off at the Nellis Air Base, near Las Vegas, on Saturday morning (local time) and then caught fire but no one was seriously injured.

American media reports say the plane involved was an RAAF EA-18G Growler fighter plane.

Extracted from:

<https://www.sbs.com.au/news/raaf-fighter-plane-catches-fire-at-us-base>

On 28/01/18 at 11:08:53